

“See Your Face Again”

© Marsh Family, March 2023

If I could hold up the world
And fly through space and time
I would cover my eyes
Till I see your face again

If I could soar like a bird
And fly through storm and rain
I would scour the skies
Till I see your face again

Maybe in the morning I'll try to call you
Maybe in the evening I'll try to sleep without you
Try to dream about you
Till I see your face again

Waiting as the rubble falls
Hoping to survive it all
Knowing that the siren's call means pain
Staring at another wall
Memories I can't recall
Even as the nightmares come again

If I could strike like a sword
I would break through any chain
Sparks would blind my eyes
Till I see your face again

I'd brave hunger and cold
Or crawl through fields of mines
I would pay any price
Till I see your face again

Maybe in the morning I'm in the sunrise
Maybe in the evening I'm in the night skies
Maybe just believing that
We can wait together
We can wait forever
Till I see your face again
